Jean Tracy (Granny Jean) graduated from Seattle University with a degree in Education. She taught elementary school in Washington, California, and Connecticut. Inspired by her desire to help the problem children in her classes, Jean returned to graduate school. Bryn Mawr College in Pennsylvania awarded her full scholarship where she achieved her Masters Degree in Social Work.

Upon returning to her home in Washington State, she worked as a probation officer and then developed a private counseling practice with families and children that spanned twenty-two years. During this time she became a fellow at the Institute for Rational Living, became a member of the Academy of Certified Social Workers, and achieved a Diplomate in Clinical Social work.
